

About Women Leading Philanthropy

Women Leading Philanthropy (WLP) is more than a giving circle—it's a movement of passionate women transforming health care for women and families at Royal University Hospital (RUH). Through combined financial commitments, donors create a $100,000 annual grant that funds groundbreaking women's health projects. Each year, female physicians and researchers pitch their initiatives, and members vote to select one transformative project.

WLP empowers donors to actively shape funding decisions, fostering collective philanthropy and innovation. Members engage in three annual meetings to hear proposals, vote, and track progress, while connecting with influential women leaders driving change in Saskatchewan.

About the Sponsorship

Become a sponsor of Women Leading Philanthropy and help shape the future of health care today. Your support helps fuel a program where groundbreaking projects in women's health go beyond basic care — projects that spark innovation, education, and lasting impact.

It's also a powerful opportunity for your organization to lead by example and demonstrate your commitment to community well-being and the future of health care. Sponsoring WLP will strengthen your organization's community presence; signal your dedication to empowering women and drive innovation where it's needed most.

Join us in a bold new kind of philanthropy, one where your voice shapes the future, your sponsorship transforms lives, and together, we empower women to lead the way in health-care innovation.

"It brings me so much energy to be a part of the Women Leading Philanthropy Program. The donors are wonderful to be around and get so much joy and inspiration out of the projects that come forward from the female-led physicians and other allied health professionals that come and pitch their projects.

~ Dr. Mary Kinloch, WLP Program Chair
